Landing page copy sheet

Write a one-page offer: who it is for, what they get, and what it costs.

The order of the page

Start with the customer and the result. Then what is included. Then the price. Then how they get it. A story about your journey can wait until someone has asked.

- Result in the first screen.
- Included, as a list.
- Price visible.

Proof

Use a proof you have: a number of customers, a named client who agreed, or a sample of the file. Do not invent a review. If you have no proof yet, show the work.

- No invented reviews.
- Show a page of the product.
- Name the format.

Objections

Answer the two questions buyers actually ask: what if it does not fit, and how do I get the file. Link to the refund policy you really have, not a policy you wish you had.

- Formats.
- The real refund rule.
- A support address.

Cut

Read the page aloud. Delete a sentence that could sit on any other product. If the page still makes sense, it was too generic to keep.

- Delete one generic sentence.
- Read it aloud.
- Ask someone who is the customer.
